Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Old Biloxi, the First Settlement in Mississippi: An Address Delivered at the Dedication of a Monument, Commemorating the Settlement of Old Biloxi and Fort Maurepas, April 8, 1920 To the Daughters of the American Revolution of this State I wish to say that I congratulate you on your loving, well directed and effective efforts to keep alive in the hearts of this and future generations the deepest veneration for the patriot soldier of the American Revolution and for his great history. This has been your primary purpose, but you have not been unmindful of other historical activities. Your Society is the pioneer in the work of marking early historical sites in Mississippi. You have been busy in erecting memorials to commemorate the notable events in our history from the Tennessee line to these blue Gulf waters. Through your efforts travelers can follow the first great trail that brought us much of our early population, and we thank you in the name of the Historical Society for this evidence of your devotion to the high ideals that have placed us among the leading civilizations of the world.territory, according to the best authorities, covered that part of North America bounded on the south by the Gulf of Mexico, on the east by Carolina and part of Canada, on the west by New Mexico, on the north in part by Canada and extending as far as the unknown lands on Hudson Bay. It is no small honor to have been the seat of government of such a vast empire known as the Province of Louisiana which is sometimes referred to as Ancient Louisiana. It was often, too, in that far distant day called the...
