Excerpt from Public Papers of George Clinton, First Governor of New York, Vol. 7: 1777-1795, 1801-1804 In spite of the devastating fire which swept the city upon the retirement of our army, New York must have struck the British and the Hessians with its picturesque ness and beauty. An officer who arrived with the German reinforcements in the summer of 1777 has this to say of it: I cannot help saying that it is a beautiful. Pleasant and level country, and New York, although the part nearest the sea is burned down, one of the finest and most pleasing seaports that I have yet seen. For the houses are not only all built in English fashion, regular and handsome, and most of them like palaces, but are also papered and very expensively furnished. It is, therefore, a pity that this country, which is also very fruitful, is inhabited by such wretches, who, in their luxury and wantonness, have not known what to do with themselves and who have only their pride to thank for their fall. Every one at home who takes their side and thinks they had a reasonable ground for rebellion. Should, for a punishment, live awhile among them, and so understand the condition of things here (for the worst man here, if he will only do something can live like the richest at home). Whoever would do this would soon change his tone. And understand that not poverty, but crime and luxury, are the cause of the whole rebellion. For although most of them are descended from runaway vagabonds who were driven out from their places, yet they are so arrogant. And live in such state in all parts of the...
