

Plough a Straight Furrow: A Memoir

By John G Powling

Spiderwize. Paperback. Condition: New. 464 pages. Dimensions: 9.2in. x 6.1in. x 1.3in. These memories have at their centre my family life, at the heart of which are fifty years of happy and fulfilling marriage to Jean and days spent with my dear daughters, Jenny and Carol. They now have children of their own who are rapidly growing up and taking their places in the adult world of the 2010s and beyond. I reflect that I have now lived in each of ten decades across two centuries. Many people who played important roles in my development were born, what is now, two centuries back, in the 1800s. My father was one of fifteen children in a family characterised by each members independence and spirit of adventure and by their attaining their majorities in the twilight of the great Victorian age. While I knew most of my uncles and aunts on my fathers side, I often imagine what life must have been like for my mothers father who was a shepherd boy in the Border country.
