My Faith Looks Up To Thee illustrates the struggles and hardships faced by real people in everyday life and living. First, the author testifies of his encounter with God through a real life miracle. He then declares that all life holds a promise because it is a gift from God and shouldn't be destroyed. Next, he shares personal experiences to illustrate the controversial black and white issues and encourages his readers to love one another since we have but one Maker who loves us all. The author reminds us that it is God who makes the final decision between life and death, therefore we should not let go. Finally, he presents the blueprint for youths who desire to succeed by focusing on the importance of obedience and family life. Themes of endurance, faith, hope and courage are dealt with in this collection. Joel Chinapen was born in Guyana, South America on March 22, 1949. He was educated at Cropper Primary, Berbice High, and the University of Guyana. He began his teaching career in 1968 at...
