American Niall Monroe returns to Hong Kong--a city he calls home--after being away for eight years. He hopes to finally find happiness with Peter Wei, his closeted lover of fourteen years, but is disappointed to find Peter has been put in an untenable position. He must marry and produce the long-awaited grandchild or get cut off by his millionaire father. Gerard Sun, a talented artist, bursts back into Niall's life after a one-night stand in Las Vegas. Circumstances force the men to deal with their attraction, especially when Niall's firm considers Gerard to help promote tourism in the People's Republic of China. James, Peter's younger brother, has been Niall's best friend since they were schoolmates. He encourages Niall to ditch his brother and move on. He encourages Niall to ditch his brother until he finds out Niall is thinking of dating Gerard Sun, a talented artist. Coming home seemed like a great idea until it wasn't. Niall finds himself a stranger in a familiar landscape, slammed on multiple fronts by broken promises, jealousy, intrigue, unimaginable deceit, and undercurrents of evil. As his dreams quickly turn into nightmares, Niall reaches out to new allies for support.
