The mere political opinions of any man are now of very little consequence. The nation is in the midst of a terrible struggle for its life, and how best and quickest to save it, are the great questions of the hour. Everything else must be subordinated to this, because everything else is less than this. War - relentless, bloody, and unprovoked - has been made, and is being made, upon a people, loving peace and wishing to pursue it, A war which, originating in fraud, speculation, and treason, must be allowed no other end than the absolute unqualified subjugation of the traitors who commenced and are carrying it on. Twenty millions of freemen are audaciously challenged by an insolent foe to yield up without a struggle, their liberty, their property, and their government. This is the issue. To this I will address myself. Its gravity demands that it be considered plainly, deliberately, and truthfully. The issue is one of individual as much as national concern. It addresses itself directly to the well-being of each, as much as to the well-being of all; nor can its consideration be avoided or postponed.
