CHICAGO. 1924. Hyper-intelligent rich teens Richard Dickie Loeb Nathan Babe Leopold are the epitome of the 1920 s Flaming Youth until they commit one of the most shocking crimes in U.S. history: the kidnap and killing of 14-year-old Bobby Franks - in the quest of proving they are Nietzschean Supermen and committing the perfect crime. The crime led to world-wide publicity and the infamous Trial of the Century with legal super star Clarence Darrow giving his most impassioned plea for mercy as their defense attorney. Over the years the boys tale has been sensationalized - but the dark truths behind the crime have never really been told.until now. Playwright Daniel Henning researched two years all across the country before writing this documentary play; exploring the hidden details of Leopold Loeb s twisted relationship and the reasons behind their bizarre crime. What s most distinctive about Henning s treatment is the way he enters the mind-set of these killers, linking the peculiar intimacy they shared with their pathological megalomania. The manipulative gamesmanship is frighteningly convincing. There s something hypnotic about the experience. The production. unfolds as a series of miniature tableaux, with short, sharply delineated scenes shifting between a sepia-tinged newsreel style and a more theatrically surreal approach. - Charles McNulty, LOS ANGELES TIMES A brilliant tour de force combining Ferris Bueller s Day Off with A Rake s Progress .provides a lot of entertainment value for the buck. Henning s language, whether invented or taken from the court transcripts, has a vitality and glee about it that matches the unreflective nature of the killers and the high, optimistic spirits of the times, but it is Henning s superb structuring of events...
