(c) Complete the cut, commencing at the upper side, ((f) Cover the cut surface with tar or paint. All such cuts should be clean; there should be no hacking. General Remarks: ---The prevention of the growth of a plant in one way causes it to develop in another, thus the removal of the lower buds of a dicotyledon causes branching higher up, so that a good head is formed on the top of - naked trunk (2A), while pinching the terminal buds gives rise to a low, stocky growth owing to the development of buds low down on the stem and the check to increase in height. Again, vegetative growth is promoted by the removal of...
