Excerpt: . . . course, the struggle is more than a womens quarrel. It injured the whole Church; and the Apostle exhorts them, in moving words: If there is any comfort in Christ, if any consolation of love, if any tender mercies and compassions, fulfil ye my joy, that ye be of the same mind, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind. He implores them to do nothing through faction or vainglory, 1 to obey the gospel without murmuring or hesitation; and as they have always been obedient, so during his absence to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling. 2 Something of what was beloved or prized by himself and the Church had thus deteriorated; but, taken as a whole, this is indeed the pearl among his churches, his joy and crown. As once he wrote to his friends at Thessalonica that they would be his crown of glory on the day of Christs coming, so in the evening of his life he utters to the Philippians his hope of being free once more, and dwelling and abiding with them until the day of the Lord. 3 2. Achaia. Paul had quitted the cities of Macedonia, firm in their ancient belief, for one of the centres of higher culture, which had advanced far beyond the provincial level of faith. Here in Athens no one was assailed for bringing forward something new to hear and discuss. If he brought forward new gods,...
