Immigrants make up 3.15 of the world s population, that s 216 million people. How do you successfully progress from emigration to being a long term immigrant? You may not have moved countries; you may have changed areas, such as rural to city. Have you ever felt disconnected to the place in which you are living, or struggled with the language, humour or behaviours? Have you have missed features of what was once your home, or found yourself wishing your family and friends were more accessible? If you have, even if you haven t changed countries, you may be subject to the emotional challenges that immigrants face, and will find help in this book. Whether you consider visits to your homeland a necessity or a luxury, you can learn how to make the...
