It is estimated that 2 million Americans have been diagnosed with Crohns disease, or other Inflammatory Bowel Diseases (IBD for short). It is a very painful and distressing disease that affects primarily the lower end of the small intestine which becomes inflamed. This can lead to an ulcerative condition which in time, may need surgery. Crohns disease is a digestive system condition which can affect anywhere in the digestive tract from the mouth to the anus. No one knows what causes it and there is no current cure. It goes into remission and then can flare-up again at any time. The usual age range for someone to be diagnosed with Crohns disease is between 20-30, but children and older adults can be diagnosed with the disease too. Various treatment options are currently available including: dietary and lifestyle changes, surgery, drugs and nutritional supplements. In my book, I have described Crohns disease in an easy to understand way explaining what it is and what medications are available. I have also included a section on natural alternatives including nutritional supplements that have been shown to help sufferers. The main thing is for you to control the disease, rather than letting...
