Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Bill Gardiner was born at Vinita, Oklahoma on April 13, 1942 and moved to the family home at La Plata, Maryland while his father was in England during World War II. Afterward, his parents purchased a house in Baltimore where Bill attended private schools, culminating in his four years at Loyola University (AB 1964). He won several awards for his poetry, which had begun to flourish. He edited Loyola s Evergreen Quarterly. Determined to be a scholar and a gentleman he attended Purdue University where he earned his MA in literature in 1966. In the 1970s, Gardiner moved to Washington, DC which would be his home for several decades. He taught Creative Writing at the American University and continued to publish in small magazines and to give readings. The Library Journal gave his work an excellent review when a collection of his poetry appeared in Proteus Magazine. He received his doctorate in literature from the University of Maryland in 1979. Also seriously interested in art and Roman antiquities and architecture, Gardiner traveled extensively in Italy in 1976 and 1979. In the 1980s...
