TROK CAVEMAN STARMAN

Xlibris Corporation. Paperback. Condition: New. 304 pages. Dimensions: 8.4in. x 5.5in. x 0.9in. This is the story of an advanced Cro-Magnon man, Trok. We share in his adventures, his day-to-day struggle with life and death and his rare but vital encounters with aliens. His adventures ultimately lead to the beginning of modern man's first civilization. That civilization emerged in the valley between the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. It is in this valley that archeologists have found proof of the first use of cultivation of crops and the domestication of animals. When we first meet Trok he is a young boy, alone. A terrible fire and stampede has destroyed his clan and killed his mother and father. As the lone survivor Trok wanders for years following the herds. His survival is dependent on his skills as a hunter. Initially he can only rely on his knowledge of snares to supply him with small animals to sustain him. In time he becomes very proficient in the use of all his weapons and tools. He studies the hunting skills of predators and quickly adapts them for himself. As time passes he becomes a great hunter. Trok fights many predators but by far the most dangerous are man-eaters, the Maguann, his greatest enemy. If Trok cannot outsmart and outfight these creatures modern man may not survive on earth. Trok's attempt to join other clans has always been met with suspicion and hostility. The warriors of the clans prove to be very territorial protecting their hunting grounds, women and children. Trok learns to avoid encounters with others of his kind for his own safety. He wanders alone for years as he longs for contact with other humans. Trok saves a young wolf dog that learns to trust him and follows him obediently. The wolf dog becomes...
