There is no branch of art in which it is possible to do good work without study and experience; but there is a great difference in difficulty between various branches, and the amateur is, as a rule, more successful in Flower, Fruit, and Still Life painting than in anything else, because these are the simplest, and require the least amount of knowledge. Of the three, Flower painting is the most difficult, because flowers alter more or less all the time that they are being painted, shifting their position, changing color, opening, closing, or wilting; while many kinds of fruit, and all still life remain exactly the same. By still life are meant glass, pottery, bric-a-brac, and other manufactured articles. Vegetables and nuts may be considered as belonging to the same class as fruit, while fish and game are animals. Flowers are very frequently...
