Books On Demand Mai 2014, 2014. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - L'idée un peu naïve du train qui passe, avec les rails qui matérialisent son déplacement, les fiches horaires indiquant la fréquence des trains, les horloges qui ornent les façades des gares ou qui surplombent les quais ce sont juste quelques images pour essayer de donner consistance à cette notion très abstraite qu'est le temps. Comme toutes les métaphores, celle-ci exprime la multitude de significations ainsi que l'ambiguïté associée à cette notion, mais elle est aussi simpliste que trompeuse. Nous demandons toutefois au lecteur d'accepter d'être porté par ce train qui le fera voyager à travers des contrées tantôt familières, tantôt exotiques, faciles ou arides, où tant d'autres nous ont précédés. Afin de tenter d'articuler entre elles des qualités et propriétés hétéroclites, mais aussi, dans la mesure de nos connaissances actuelles, de dégager, entre les fausses évidences et les idées toutes faites, des indices plus sûrs pour cerner l'objet de notre recherche. Claire Wagner-Rémy, mathématicienne de formation, écrivain et journaliste scientifique, est notamment l'auteur d'ouvrages sur la philosophie des sciences, l'intelligence artificielle et les logiques appliquées à l'informatique, et d'un cours sur la logique classique et les logiques non standard. 248 pp. Français.
