Excerpt: .said that hell would not be hell to him so long as he and his boon companions were together. Another former acquaintance that I met there interested me even more. He was a man whom I had always regarded as deeply religious, and his presence in hell (by which I mean as one who was undergoing punishment) was to me the greater cause for surprise. What is it, I said to him, that brings you here? not impurity, surely? and I cannot think of any other reason. No, he answered, it is not impurity, for that was never one of my failings. To this day, I am unable to understand the relish with which most young men (and occasionally, be it said with shame, those who are not young) listen to the kind ot conversation which is current sometimes in the smoking-room. We hold...
