Plants are much like animals. They move, eat, drink, breathe, and sleep. Climbing plants twist themselves around any support at hand. Some flowers turn their faces always to the light. In parts of Brazil the ground is covered with sensitive plants, which, when touched close their leaves. Plants take food through millions of little mouths in their roots, and suck water from the ground. They breathe through their leaves. What have you learned becomes of the air they breathe out? (See Lesson XLV Many plants when they sleep close their leaves and hug close together, as if to keep warm. Some plants, if chilled by the cold or kept where a light is left burning, will not go to sleep. When the cold weather comes, some plants go to sleep for the winter as do bears and a few other animals. Plants have sap which circulates up and down through their branches, as blood does through the veins and arteries of animals. 2. A dry seed does not look as if it had life. and yet when placed in the damp ground it springs up and becomes a living, growing plant. The wisest man that...
