Excerpt from Biographical Record of the Class of Seventy, Yale University, 1870-1904 OF all the classes which Yale sent into the world up to 1870, ours was the fourth in size, numbering at the time of graduation 113. If all who had been connected with us had graduated, the number would have been 178. Some, however, were born sick, some achieved sickness, and some had sickness thrust upon them. Hence only 1 13 were well enough to bear away the coveted diploma, although two more have since received it by special vote of the corporation. The career of the Class exhibited no startling features. We were not, as a whole, an erratic body. There were some among us, indeed, who were fit for stratagems and spoils; but the sentiment of the Class was Opposed to hatching such things, so our behavior was generally deco rous, though, it must be confessed, markedly lawless in little things. But our scholarship was so fair and our morals so decent that we were excused for our somewhat annoying delinquencies. With seventy-two of our graduates mem bers of Christian churches, and a large propotion of our leaders actively interested in religious effort, it was hardly respectable to be very wicked. Thus it was that we came to be recognized in College and in New Haven circles as being, on the whole, a pretty good lot of fellows; as indeed we were. We had few quarrels among ourselves, and those which we had were of short duration. By Class Day they were all buried, and none of their ghosts has ever appeared at our love feasts to rob us of our appetites. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds...
