Timothy Cutler, D. D. Late Rector of Said Church As this is a state which oftentimes insensibly steals upon a Christian, from that necessary intercourse with sensual objects which the condition of his nature requires; it becomes a matter of great importance, frequently to examine the temper and disposition of the soul; its love and aversion, its satisfaction and distaste, that we may be enabled to judge, whether its chief pleasure be rational, and becoming the dignity of its high original; but especially to look for ward to that solemn period, which must shortly close the scene of all present enjoyments, and lay open an unclouded prospect of eternity. The render this prospect desirable now, and agreeable when it arrives, the example recorded in the next may be highly useful, since neither the troubles not temptations of this life, can have much influence upon him, who by a lively faith and steadfast hope has respect to the recompence of the reward.
