Excerpt: . . . the Statutes as may be submitted to it, after the proposed measure or measures shall have passed through the prescribed course of preparation. That it is lawful, has been already shewn upon general principles of jurisprudence, upon the corporate principle of making bye-laws, upon the Statutory principle rogandi, abrogandi, interpretandi, moderandi. I am now in the next place to shew, what the University practice has been upon the subject before and after the passing of the Laudian Digest, and at the time when it was inchoate, but not completed. Sect. V. The legality of the system de facto is shewn from the usage, or immemorial practice, of the University. The legality of the present Scholastic system of the University is now to be shewn, by the evidence of its practice ancient and modern, in short, by a reference to its acts from the time when it was first recognized as an Universitas Scholarium by Henry III. to the present day. Convocation has always acted in these matters, as a body would act, which considered itself entrusted with legislative functions in matters appertaining to Scholastic discipline; it has modified, adjusted, adapted them to the changes and vicissitudes of human knowledge. This part of the argument will consist of facts and the evidence of facts, and will impose upon me, what those who love to rhetorize upon the pages of a Review abhor, the homely duty of honest citation. The power of Convocation to make and...
