It should be studied in connection with these standards. It is hoped that similar studies will be issued by other cities and that comprehensive and detailed comparative tables will be published showing the building condition throughout the United States. Such a survey of the church and religious education plants of a city will be found to serve many purposes: First, it directs the attention of the community to the newer forms of service which a modern church may be expected to perform. Second, it presents the existing situation with its strong and weak points in the most concise, interesting and intelligible way possible: it shows the actual and relative adequacy of provision for various forms of service both by sections of the city and by different denominations. Third, it shows where repairs and rearrangements are immediately necessary and also where these adjustments are economically advisable. Fourth, it furnishes data necessary for guiding programs of building. When the findings of such a survey are studied in the light of the elements which are determining the rate, extent and direction of the city's future growth it is possible for a city church council or a denominational board to build in a way to provide for future extension. With a...
