A typical day for MARINA DeSALVO BROWNING. . . check the backseat of the car three times and the trunk at least once (even when you think you've checked enough, check one more time); only wear bland colors to school--that way you fade into the cinder blocks better and always--always--keep to the corners; use your hair as a shield; always sit in the middle of the classroom--you blend in better; always be the first one out of your seat when the bell rings--helps to avoid the hall crowds; at the end of the day, let the wave out of the building coast you to your car; check the backseat and trunk once more and peel out of the parking lot; get home, blaze through the front door, lock it, set the alarm, run up the stairs to your bedroom and only breathe when you've closed and locked the door behind you. Congratulations! You've made it through another day. . . now go check under the bed, the closet, and behind the shower curtain. . . keep a firm grip on...
