Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: .in itself, and surrounded by fragments of a nobler art of which it is quick in admiration and ready in imitation, and yet so strong in its own new instincts that it reconstructs and rearranges every fragment that it copies or borrows into harmony with its own thoughts--a harmony at first disjointed and awkward, but completed in the end, and fused into perfect organization; all the borrowed elements being subordinated to its own primal, unchanged life. I do not know any sensation more exquisite than the discovering of the evidence of this magnificent struggle into independent existence; the detection of the borrowed thoughts, nay, the finding of the actual blocks and stones carved by other hands and in other ages, wrought into the new halls, with a new expression and purpose given to them, like the blocks of unshaped rocks which we find in the heart of the lava current, great witnesses to the power which has fused all but those calcined fragments into the mass of its homogeneous fire. As for the relation of Judaism to Christianity, Reform Judaism admits, with Maimonides, the great service the latter has rendered to humanity as a civilizing and ethicizing agency. Through Christianity the fundamental ethical ideas of the Jewish prophets were diffused among the nations. Despite the fact that the Jews have suffered indescribable persecutions for many centuries at the hands of the Christian world, and still are enduring abuse and maltreatment from the same source in many...
