Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In Code Name Ndebele 14 we follow up on the CSAR (Combat Search and Rescue) book, Code Name One Alpha, to see if it is possible to rescue downed aircrew from within a city environment and not just any city, a hostile one like Mogadishu or Mosul in recent years. This is radically different from normal CSAR rescues taking place in rural areas. The scenario is where the aircrew are either kept safe by locals, spies or paramilitary spies (called Assassins in GMJ Books) already inside the city. Or, conceivably the aircrew are held by the enemy after being captured and then they must be rescued in the same way as any other hostage rescue with the crucial difference that this is behind enemy lines. The first problem is establishing contact and deciding if it is worth trying to rescue them or not - something we discussed in detail in Code Name One Alpha, looking at history and the famous BAT 21 Bravo rescue of the Vietnam Era. Even if the attempt is authorised, the friendlies inside the city need help to get the aircrew out or rescued from captivity. How do you infiltrate the Special Forces Team without causing even more hostages? There is a way. In this book, we introduce you to what became known as the Ndebele Approach where three sections of the chosen Special Forces platoon went in underwater using SDVs (Special Delivery Vehicles) launched from a surface warfare ship and not a submarine as could have been done but was not for reasons that will become clear inside the book. The second and more exciting infiltration takes place by way of a HAHO (High Altitude, High Opening)...
