By Ira Sukrungruang

University of Missouri Press, United States, 2011. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. On one side of the door, the rich smell of sweet, spicy food and the calm of Buddhist devotion; on the other, the strangeness of a new land. When Ira Sukrungruang was born to Thai parents newly arrived in the U.S., they picked his Jewish moniker out of a book of American names. In this lively, entertaining, and often hilarious memoir, he relates the early life of a first-generation Thai-American and his constant, often bumbling attempts to reconcile cultural and familial expectations with the trials of growing up in 1980s America. Young Ira may have lived in Oak Lawn, Illinois, but inside the family's bi-level home was Thailand with American conveniences. They ate Thai food, spoke the Thai language, and observed Thai customs. His bedtime stories were tales of Buddha and monkey-faced demons. On the first day of school his mother reminded him that he had a Siamese warrior's eyes - despite his thick glasses - as Auntie Sue packed his Muppets lunch box with fried rice. But when his schoolmates played tag he was always It, and as he grew, he...

Reviews

This publication is wonderful. It was actually written very completely and beneficial. You may like the way the writer composed this publication.
