Excerpt from Predicting the Behavior of Finite Precision Lanczos and Conjugate Gradient Computations Finite precision CG computations for solving an  $n$  by  $n$  symmetric positive definite linear system  $Ar = b$  sometimes fail to converge after  $n$  steps, especially when  $n$  is small. In such cases, it is demonstrated that exact CG applied to the corresponding large linear system  $A^5: b$  also requires more than 11 iterations to converge. More commonly, finite precision CG computations converge in far fewer than  $n$  steps, and the same holds for the exact CG algorithm applied to any matrix  $A$  whose eigenvalues are clustered in tiny intervals about the eigenvalues of  $A$ . Frequently, finite precision CG computations go through several steps at which there is only a modest reduction in the error and then at the next step there is a very sharp decrease in the error. This same behavior is observed in the exact CG algorithm applied to matrices  $A$  whose eigenvalues are distributed in it tight clusters about the eigenvalues of  $A$ .
