Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Obligation of Contracts Clause of the United States Constitution The obligation of a contract is, of course, chiefly determined by the language of the particular contract in question, and the courts must necessarily interpret this language for themselves, so that, in many cases, perhaps in the greater part of those here reviewed, the court is engaged simply in construing the language of particular contracts. It is doing what any state court might have to do, under the ordinary law or under provisions in the state constitution, and which the Supreme Court itself might have had to do under the due process clause of the federal Constitution, as well as under the contracts clause. As one of the parties to these contracts is a State, however, a new aspect is put upon the question; the contract is no longer construed by the ordinary rules; it is interpreted in the light of a special canon of construction that has been adopted by the courts, namely, that all such contracts are to be construed strictly against the grantee and in favor of the State. The general nature of this doctrine of strict construction must therefore be considered, and this will be followed by chapters upon charters, special franchises, rate privileges and tax exemptions, all of which will be chiefly taken up with tracing the application of this doctrine to the facts of particular cases. The effect of mortgage foreclosures, consolidations, mergers, sales and reorganizations of corporations is included in the study, first, because no Opinion can be given upon the question whether a corporation has or has not the privileges which belonged to its predecessor corporation unless...
