Excerpt from Some Insects Injurious to Vegetable Crops: A Series of Articles Dealing With Insects of This Class The various species of noxious insects discussed have, with few exceptions, been destructive during the years 1900 and 1901, but a few came under observation at an earlier date. The work is therefore, to a certain extent, a report on the principal insects which have been injurious and whose ravages have been brought to the attention of this office as affecting the vegetable crops of the country during the past two years. Circumstances beyond the writer s control have pre vented the publication of this matter until the present time. The initial article treats of the potato stalk weevil, which has been very injurious for a number of years but has never received extensive notice in any of the publications of this Department; hence, all avail able facts concerning it, together with an original illustration, have been brought together. The Northern leaf-footed plant-bug attracted more attention during the last two years than ever before in its his tory, and its abundance in the Vicinity of the District of Columbia enabled a study of its habits and the practical completion of a knowl edge of its life history, the results of which are here given.
