Causes of Gout Gout is caused by elevated uric acid levels in your blood. This may lead you to the question, where do we get uric acid from? A Breakdown of Cells Quite simply put, uric acid is the breakdown of amino acids. Most of these come from animal proteins, but they are present in other foods and beverages. Not all amino acids turn to uric acid, but aminos that break down into purines turn into uric acid. Some beneficial amino acids are used by our body, and whatever is left over...
