

Holden Statesman

By Frederic P. Miller

Alphascript Publishing Nov 2009, 2009. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - The Holden Statesman and Caprice are a series of full-size luxury vehicles produced by the Australian General Motors (GM) division of Holden since 1990. Between 1971 and 1984, Holden marketed their long-wheelbase sedans under the Statesman marque. The Statesman and Caprice are essentially long-wheelbase variants of the Commodore range, and as of 2006, are the largest rear-wheel drive sedans offered by GM. Internationally, Statesmans and Caprices are sold as the Bitter Vero, Buick Park Avenue, the Chevrolet Caprice and the Daewoo Veritas. Previously, Statesmans have been badged as the Buick Royaum and Daewoo Statesman. The main difference between the Statesman and the Caprice lies within their equipment packages; Caprices are commonly powered by V8 engines rather than V6s, and whilst they may be thought of as fully specified versions of their Statesman siblings, the two were separate Holden models by this period. Appearance wise, Caprices can be distinguished by their unique interior and exterior trim such as the grille. Traditionally, the Statesman along with the Caprice have been direct rivals to the Ford Fairlane and LTD correspondingly. 192 pp. English.
