Reviews

These kinds of book is every thing and helped me hunting forward plus more. It is probably the most remarkable book we have read through. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: . . . to the pipe, and could be dented readily by the finger-nail and pushed aside by slow hard pressure without cracking, the pipe being clean underneath, showing the mill scale in some cases. Very little corrosion, tuberculation or pitting of the pipe or blistering of its coating was found, the carrying capacity being remarkably well maintained, probably within 10 per cent, of its original amount in most of the pipe, and within 20 per cent, in the oldest and worst case found, as indicated by certain friction loss tests. The exterior coating, while on the whole not in quite such good condition as the interior, was found still generally sound except in those few cases of very limited length in which the pipe traverses soils highly organic or acid in content, such as certain black adobe soils and salt water marshes. The record is a very creditable one. Further comment on the coatings used on steel pipe on the Pacific Coast is given in the following extract from the final report on the Los Angeles aqueduct: A large variety of paints and protective coatings were investigated. It was found that in the use of lead paints the rust scale must be carefully removed, as the paint would not penetrate it but would fleck off, leaving the rust spot beneath. The paint used was a residual hydrocarbon oil, resulting from the manufacture of gas from California asphalt oil. It is different from the eastern coal tars and has...
