Investigators determined that a pilots cocaine use was a contributing factor in a January, 1988 crash of a commuter aircraft in rural Colorado in which nine people died. In April, 1987, a bus struck a bridge on the George Washington Parkway in Virginia, killing one and injuring 32 passengers. The driver tested positive for cocaine, Valium, and marijuana. The grounding of the Exxon Valdez earlier this year in Prince William Sound, Alaska, in which the captains history of alcohol use is at issue, rings vividly in our minds. Fortunately, our efforts have borne some fruit. Last year, the Department of Transportation issued rules mandating testing of safety-sensitive workers for illegal drugs in the rail, motor carrier, aviation, maritime, pipeline, and mass transit industries. However, enactment of legislation to mandate drug and alcohol testing for transportation workers remains my objective and top priority. Very simply, the DOT rules do not go far enough, failing to include alcohol in industry testing programs. Accident statistics prove alcohol abuse a threat to the safety of the American traveling public at least as big - if not big bigger - than illegal drugs. For example, over a 7-year period, the Department of Transportation found 10,300 individuals who had...
