Excerpt: . . . estate lying in the state of Michigan, is, by force and virtue of that will. vested in him as trustee, and that this results independently of the action of the court in proceeding to issue to him letters testamentary in pursuance of his nomination in the will. The court, after what I have just read, proceeds further to order that he shall render an account as executor and trustee of his conduct of the affairs of the estate; that he shall turn over all books, papers and property, to Clay Crawford, who is the other executor and trustee, and that he shall also execute and deliver to Clay Crawford. as such executor and trustee, a deed or deeds of these lands in the state of Michigan (and I believe, some lands elsewhere or some mining interests), conveying this property to Clay Crawford as executor; and with respect to this part of the order, it is urged that if the court had the power to remove said Stafford as trustee, it had no power or authority to require him to divest him Stafford, Exr. v. Am. Missionary Association, etc. self of the title to property which he derived through the will, and to convey it to Clay Crawford. On the other hand, it is contended by the defendants in error that under the statute the probate court is given such exclusive and final jurisdiction in the matter of removing executors and trustees, as amounts to...
