At the close of the ice age the land was relatively much lower than at present. The position of the former sea level is marked by beaches which have been preserved in a few localities. On both sides of Texada island, in the northwest half, beaches are found from 300 to 350 feet above sea level. At Powell river on the main coast sands and gravel occur 350 feet above the sea. From these examples it is assumed that the post-glacial depression in this region was at least 350 feet. Seechelt inlet formerly opened in the Strait of Georgia at Seechelt. In late post-glacial time, when the land was but a little lower than it is at present, a sand and gravel bar was built up by long shore currents across the entrance. This bar is now twenty to thirty feet...
