On the death of mss Baldwin in 1897, this endowment had grown to about and except for in religious bequests, it was left by her to the Seminary intact. This money had been realized from the school in a day (alas, now gone forever) when educational institutions could be profit-making, and had been secured to it by the wise investments of Miss Baldwin and her helper, Mr. William Wayt King. Death of Miss Mary Julia Baldwin came to Augustashe was loved in return with a devotion accorded only to rare souls. Two years before her death the trustees gave fitting expression to their appreciation of Miss Baldwin s consecration of her life to the school by changing its name from Augusta Female Seminary to Mary Baldwin Seminary.
