Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Report on the Iron of Dodge and Washington Counties, State of Wisconsin Mentioned, is the same in its character and arrangement, and has the same geological features. It shows, in its original position, a bed of thin shaly rock, composed of siliceous earthy grains, with some larger connections intermixed either of a mammillary form. Or resembling very smooth rolled pebbles, but these obviously concretions. The bed is generally very uniform in its character, but with occasional thicker and more compact layers. It is usually overlaid by a layer, 3 to 4 inches thick, of a very hard dark form, blue seamed compact ore, breaking with a conchoidal fracture, with occasional glossy seams of specular iron. This layer in some instances adheres firmly to the lime stone above, and points of the same ore or stains of the red oxide are found more or less disseminated through the adjoining rock. Iron pyrites is also found disseminated through the immediately overlying limestone, and may be observed in the same block apparently passing from the unaltered pyrites at the centre to red oxide at the surface of the block. At Hartford irregular layers or pockets of red and white jointed clay, blended in large and smaller segregations or patches, are formed in the lime stone a few feet above the ore, very similar to the joint clay of the openings in the mineral districts, particularly those in its lower bed of the Upper Magnesian. This clay breaks by smooth seams into more or less regular fragments, sometimes very small, like those of the soap clay immediately investing the lead mine in some openings in...
