Mission readiness and effective employment are achieved through the development and mastery of core competencies for AFINC crewmembers. It provides cyberspace operations examiners and cybercrew members with procedures and evaluation criteria used during performance evaluations on the Air Force Intranet Control weapon system. This AFI provides specific information and grading criteria for each crew position, special mission qualification (SMQ), instructor upgrade qualification, and Stan/Eval examiner objectivity evaluations. All evaluations fall under the Qualification (QUAL), Mission (MSN) or Spot (SPOT) categories. It prescribes procedures for operating the AFINC weapon system by providing mission planning guidelines, standard operating procedures, minimum forces, terrain, communication plan, vulnerability/operating window, deconfliction plan, abort criteria and contingency plan and weapon system health/status. If your organization is not using this information as a general guide for developing your own tactics and procedures, then you are at a severe disadvantage. Air Force has been doing this for a while and they provide defensive and operational guidance that can be followed universally to protect critical computer networks.
