Garnsey Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 56 pages. Dimensions: 8.5in. x 5.5in. x 0.1in. TO sportsmen of riper years several seasons of almost total abstinence from social shooting may have meant a certain amount of inconvenience inseparable from the upsetting of crusted habits. Even those who took it thus were in a minority. Most of us had enough to do otherwise, and too much by far to think about. But to the youth of Britain those four years are a dead loss in the matter of sporting education and that the youth of Britain intends to shoot, the market for lets, and even for sales, is a sufficient indication. Even the boy of unmilitary age prior to the Armistice has lacked that experience which goes far to shape his prospective qualifications, not only as a good shot, but also-and this is far more important-as a safe one, and, incidentally, as a welcome guest now and perhaps as a tactful host in the future. For such a desirable consummation is the result of observation of the best models and imitation of their technique. Going out with a keeper may teach a boy the habits of game and vermin, and then the elements of shooting, the safe management of a gun in limited company but not so well as would going out with his father, if his father is of the right sort and can spare the time. Many fathers of the right sort can scarcely buy cartridges at their present price The keepers style in shooting is usually a nightmare, unless he be one of the competition-winning order, in which case he will improbably be a good keeper. The latter is more skilled in the use of traps and climbing-irons than of the deadly hail. But the interruption in the career of...
