By Unknown Author

Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Dissector, 1845, Vol. 2 What from this barren being do we Our senses narrow, and our reason from life is short, and truth a gem that loves to flee And all things weighed in Custom's falsest scale. With Opinion an omnipotence-whose veil then Mantles the earth with darkness - until right And wrong are accidents - and men grow a little their own judgments should rid them And their free thoughts be crimes and earth have too much light. The operation of blood-letting is so associated in the minds of most men, with the practice of phlebotomy, that when a very sensible German physician, some time ago, petitioned the King of Prussia to make the employment of the lancet penal; he was laughed at from one end of Europe to the other. This you will not wonder at, if you consider that; the multitude always think whatever, is wise right but a little reflection will teach you that there must have been a period in the World's history, when the faucet was unknown as a remedy;...
