Createspace, United States, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Did you know that your body is programmed to develop cancer and die? It s not a secret. If nothing else kills you, and you live long enough, you will get cancer. And die. Any number of diseases, disorders and other medical maladies may contribute to a person feeling lonely and isolated. Sad and depressed and anxious and frustrated. And scared - absolutely terrified. Cancer for sure. Blindness. Severe burns. Obesity. AIDS. Bipolar Disorder, Schizophrenia and other mental illnesses. Multiple Sclerosis. Assorted debilitating phobias. Amputations and congenital physical deformations. Stomach-related issues. Heart failure. However, the disease of addiction (to drugs/alcohol) may be the only medical condition that actually intends to cause a human being to feel lonely and isolated and fearful. The specific aim of addiction is to totally isolate a person. And then to kill the person. Alone in a room, usually a small, unpleasant room. Addiction, through its cunning and baffling tactics, methodically and progressively sets out to destroy its host. Sometimes quickly, but much more often very slowly and deliberately. Like cancer, addiction is generally defined by the medical community as a chronic, progressive, relapsing disease with no cure. It is a terminal disease that ultimately results in death - a very painful death. It can be successfully treated and even permanently abated, but only for small percentage of those truly afflicted with the illness. Unlike cancer - which left untreated will also completely destroy its human host and result in death - addiction negatively impacts and severely damages anyone and anything related to the afflicted individual. It severs relationships with loved ones. It tears apart families, businesses, and all manner of material property. It...
