Excerpt from The Island School: An Original, Thrilling, and Absorbing Story of School Life and Adventure UN E is a sunny month in the Mediterranean, and the sun never shone brighter in all its glory than on a certain day in that month, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Ploughing over the golden glittering deep, a mail steamer or, carrying th 8 Spanish ?ag, was bearing east, when a boat with a lateen sail drew right across her path and let her canvas down. The act was apparently a mad one, but that little boat must have been expected, for the steamer at the same time slowed down, and veering a bit from her course, avoided a collision. There were three sunburnt youngsters in the boat, one of whom sang out cheerily, in the English tongue, Mail-boat from Fermentera, please.
