Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .In Wild, the second book of the Alice in Fred's Place trilogy, Rony and her family have escaped from New Carolina and Main's unrelenting vigilance. But, with virtually no food or water and winter still upon them, survival takes precedence over the rescue of Rony's brother and mother. When the first person they meet in the Wild is a corpse with a knife sticking out of his chest, Rony begins to worry that escape may have been an impulsive and inappropriate path. The unlikely group must use their wits as they encounter the worst mankind has to offer and the best, sometimes in the same people. Rony's grandmother, Amita is a physicist, a computer hacker, a lover, and 79 years old. Jake, her grandfather, is strong, in love with Amita, overprotective of his granddaughters, and 81 years old. Rony's little sister, Emmy, is gentle, yet pragmatic, and has an unusual connection with nature for an 8-year-old child. Jack, gorgeous, fearless, and powerful, joins the group. But he's a dog. Bear finally arrives. While Rony expected this to make her happy, she finds that nothing, including her friendship with Bear, is easy. An encounter with a murderous trio leaves Rony wounded in body but strengthens her resolve. An unfortunate experience with worms on a fishing expedition turns her into an expert hunter. The group is captured by a primitive mountain man and invited to join a polite Christian settlement, but the experiences leave them questioning what it means to be civilized. And as Rony discovers her own weaknesses and strengths, she is shocked to find herself falling in love with Bear. This is a dystopian novel replete with...
