Excerpt: . . . nd the subsequent discovery of information about al-Qaedas efforts to obtain weapons of mass destruction, combined with the National Intelligence Estimate, make it imperative that we focus more resources on what should be our highest national security priority, and that is preventing the proliferation of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons. And finally, is the Presidents budget for international affairs adequate to protect our national security The President requests 25. 4 billion, which is less than the amount provided in 2002, if you include the emergency additions we added to the budget. The question is if you take that away, there is about a 6 percent increase. Is that enough True, as compared to the regular appropriations contemplated before September 11, this budget, as I said, contains a 5. 9 percent increase in nominal terms. But these are not regular times, as the President has correctly emphasized. The budget this year should be measured against the total spending for last year. By that standard, the budget for fiscal 2003 appears to assume...
