Anchor, 2010. Book Condition: New. Brand New, Unread Copy in Perfect Condition. A+ Customer Service! Summary: "A funny, self-mocking memoir about how persistently Mr. Kirn went astray. . . . Great fun." -The New York Times "The witty, self-castigating story of the author's single-minded quest to succeed at a series of tests and competitions that took him from one of the lowest-ranked high schools in Minnesota to Princeton." -The New York Times Book Review "Very few people could get away with complaining about attending Princeton University, but Walter Kirn does. . . . Darkly hilarious." -The Plain Dealer "Scathing and funny. . . . Too delicious." -Newsweek "Hilarious. . . . Kirn recounts the many ways that the America educational rat race betrayed him." -The Washington Post Book World "Tough, funny, and moving. . . . What's such great fun about the book is the intense good humor with which he looks back, and the wonderful portraits he provides of the side characters in his life. . . . There's a kind of joyous cackle behind these colorful scenes, and a sadness, too, both finally giving way to a clean-edged wisdom that infiltrates his story as he leads us toward his moral awakening." -O, The Oprah Magazine "Tartly funny." -Newsday "The revelation that skating on the surface of knowledge might kill him if he didn't cut it out was Kirn's alone, but its impact registers far and wide." -Elle "A diverting memoir that has less to do with grades and standardized test scores than with a Mormon-raised farm boy's difficulty adjusting to the temptations and prejudices of an Ivy League school." -The Miami Herald "A smart, ambitious writer. . . . Kirn's sentences would be a delight even if they were empty. That they address a serious subject- the Ivy League...
