Some of the blacks are expert carvers in wood as is shown in the images made of cedar, and which are afterwards gaily painted to serve for saints, c Many of these are cleverly executed, but the drapery is formal and the figures conventional. The calabashes and the cocoa nut shells are also prettily carved by the coast negroes in arabesque patterns; occasionally monsters are introduced into the embellishment when the carver has wished to show his skill in fish, bird, beast, and man--like representations. Some of the smaller calabashes are prettily painted in slight patterns and highly varnished. COCOA NUTS. Some of the cocoa nut groves are extremely beautiful, many of the trees rise fifty feet and even higher. The grey stems beautifully crowned with feathered leaves, underneath which hang large bunches of the greenish brown fruit, which, when full-grown...
