

Piggybanking: Preparing Your Financial Life for Kids and Your Kids for a Financial Life

By Jeff D. Opdyke

HarperCollins Publishers Inc, United States, 2010. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 198 x 135 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.When couples are planning their financial lives together, few questions are as significant as how to afford a family. The average middle-income family will spend somewhere between $185k and $270k raising a child through the first seventeen years of life, according to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. And now, in this difficult financial climate, tension levels are running even higher over how to cover these costs. To help couples meet this challenge, veteran Wall Street Journal personal finance writer Jeff Opdyke has laid out everything they need to do. From preparing financially for a baby s arrival to the financial lessons kids need to learn so that they have a solid grasp on money by they time they leave home, the chapters are split into natural divisions that track money s major categories: earning, saving, spending, investing, and giving. Finally, there s a section on the all-important basics of what parents should know to save for and ultimately afford college costs. Opdyke, who for six years was the Love Money columnist for the Journal, provides a...
