Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from The New Era in South Africa: With an Examination of the Chinese Labour Question At the conclusion of the war the one idea prevalent in South Africa was that peace would immediately inaugurate an era of unprecedented prosperity. Every where there was an almost feverish anticipation Of the coming boom. The Government was urged to perfect its administrative machinery, and any attempt to stem the tide of popular impatience at once created an outcry. The possibility of labour difficulties seems to have been lost sight of, and the dislocating effects of the war on the Kadir population. Hence, when, owing to the labour shortage, instead of a boom a slump set in, with a long period of depression, the reaction was inevitable. The Government, which had been urged to administrative efforts of all kinds, was now blamed for undue optimism and accused of financial reckless ness. From extravagant hopes South Africa passed to equally extravagant gloom. Optimism and pessimism alike had been hasty and irrational, but, in view of the financial depression, few people were disposed to reason calmly as to...
