But the most astonishing thing of all is that a professor in a medical college should advocate going back to the old measures in our Pharmacopoeia, as recently appeared in these columns. What we need is some means of creating a determination on the part of the young doctors entering into practice, to use the metric system as they have been taught. Take every prescription you desire to use, and transcribe it into metric terms, not with that kind of literal accuracy that introduces awkward and unnecessary decimals, but in such form as is best adapted to metric quantities, and memorize it for use in that form, and encourage the druggist to weigh it with metric weights,...
