Enitharmon Press, United Kingdom, 2005. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Imperium opens with a high seriousness rare in contemporary poetry. Seven sacraments - meditations on those moments at which the sacred can still touch our lives - are followed by nineteen sonnets dedicated to the dismembered spirit of the poet s father. But the collection is dominated by the title poem, a fine successor to the historical sequences which distinguished Hilary Davies last collection, In a Valley of This Restless Mind . Using a range of voices and perspectives, she creates a narrative of the Napoleonic Wars, taking us from Chatham Docks to Aboukir, from a Glamorgan foundry to Trafalgar. Here and in the book s final sequence, Southwark , which swings between a prehistoric wattenmeer and the London of 1958, then back to Roman times via a wonderfully riotous Elizabethan South Bank, Davies satisfies us both emotionally and intellectually, drawing from her historical sources a rich, invigorating music.
