This is the very best publication we have read through right up until now. It is one of the most incredible book we have read through. Once you begin to read the book, it is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding.

THE RESERVES OF THE CHEMICAL WARFARE SERVICE, VOL. 16 (CLASSIC REPRINT) (PAPERBACK)

Forgotten Books, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Reserves of the Chemical Warfare Service, Vol. 16 They are our representatives, and it is our duty fairly but fearlessly to judge their acts. The Chemical Warfare Service was not born at home. The natural home of the Chemical Warfare Service is the War Department; but after the battle of Ypres, when the British infantry suffered such fearful destruction from the waves of chlorine gas, loosed unexpectedly by the Germans, when it was seen that gas was to play an important part in the war, the men who first woke up to the importance of this new form of warfare were not in the War Department. The chemists in the Bureau of Mines, backed by Dr. Manning, the Director, began experimental work. Later began the erection of different plants under various divisions of the government, and finally Secretary Baker, in order to bring coordination into the work, wisely recommended to the President that all these divisions be combined into one organization: - the Chemical Warfare Service. So in July 1919 the consolidation of all these different parts took place, under the authority given in the Overman Act. When the full history of this war is written, I think one of the outstanding chapters is going to concern the remarkable results obtained in research at American University Experiment Station, and at Edgewood Arsenal in the building of that wonderful plant. It was not the fault of the Chemical Warfare Service that the gas made at Edgewood Arsenal was not fired at the enemy in American shells. Tons of gas in bulk were shipped to the allies. Then the plants lay idle for months, waiting only for shells in which to load...
